

ACV FL 395 Noble fiefs of Cudrefin for Ludovicus de Sabaudia, 1458, commissaire Bartholomeus de Tretorens

Abstracts prepared by John W. McCoy (RealMac@aol.com) © 2021.

This terrier, a companion to FL 394, which contains reconnaissances of individual tenants in the same seigneurie, turns out to contain history as far back as the middle of the 14th Century. The reconnaissances in FL 395 list the names of the censiers who are subject to each reconnaissant. The predecessor for this terrier is FL 392, and specifically, the section of FL 392 beginning at fol. 410, for the “noble fiefs” of the seigneurie of Cudrefin. However, FL 395 contains considerable additional information about some of these fiefs that was not included in FL 392.

FL 395 also provides verbatim transcripts of some much earlier documents (14th Century) from the tenure of the Grandisson family in the seigneurie of Cudrefin. Some of these documents contain the names of residents, vicars, etc., a discovery that may prove useful in establishing a chronology for some families, and especially for the problem of dating the terrier fragment FL 111 for the seigneurie of Lugnorre, since many families in the area held properties in both seigneuries.

One goal of our analysis of this terrier is to clarify, to the extent possible, the succession of individual families who held property in the seigneurie of Cudrefin and Lugnorre. For some of the noble fiefs, this goal has led us to undertake a nearly complete transcript of certain sections, as well as cross-referencing with related terriers such as FL 392 and others.

In spite of the title, not all of the reconnaissances in FL 395 are noble fiefs. For a true noble fief, we expect to find explicit language stating that the fief is indeed “noble”, and we also expect that the reconnaissant is described in similar terms. Thus, in the first reconnaissance, for Petrus de Constantina, we find the phrase in feudum et homagium nobile et ligium, as well as the designation dominus de Orsens. The reconnaissances in which the fief itself is described as noble, or where the family's nobility is clearly emphasized are those at fol. 1, for Petrus de Constantina ; fol. 10v, Jacobus de Felga ; fol. 13, Claudius de Pitigniaco ; fol. 26v, Anthonius de Adventhica ; fols. 59 and 79, de Melduno family (the principal fief is the town and jurisdiction of Port Albin) ; and fols. 90 and 114, Bernaz heirs. The remaining reconnaissances involve individuals (several are descendants of lesser noble families, but the holdings seem fairly ordinary and are not described as noble fiefs), various religious institutions, notaries who have acquired extensive holdings, at least two significant concessions to a particular family (one for the gates of Cudrefin and the other for all of the mills of Cudrefin), and the municipalities of Cudrefin and Montmagniel.

Is the name we transcribe as de Viveis (modern de Vevey) actually de Vineis (modern des Vignes)? Either reading is possible in the old script, and both are found in publications by modern historians. However, the de Vevey family is well documented in this area, and we strongly prefer this reading.

(This fief is a portion of the noble fief of Johannes de Adventhica described in FL 392, fols. 426-435, dated in 1426. The other portion of the fief from FL 392 is found here in FL 395 in the form of a noble fief held by Anthonius de Adventhica below, fols. 26v-44v. However, the present noble fief includes some items that are not found in FL 392 and whose source is presently unknown, specifically a series of at least 34 parcels held by Johannes de Bellarippa, below, fols. 16v (c) through 18v (d), another 18 parcels held by Nicodus Gruon, fols. 20 (e) through 21 (f), as well as two parcels held by Girardus Mehandi (=Méan, of Payerne), fols. 13v (e) and 14 (a), and three held by Girardus Hugonet, fols. 24v (e) through (g). While most of the parcels in the fief in FL 392 can be identified in either the present fief of Claudius de Pitigniaciaco or in the fief of Anthonius de Adventhica, an entire section of the earlier fief in FL 392, fols. 433v (f) through 434 (m), at that time held by Johannes de Roumont and his comparcionarii, has not yet been found anywhere in FL 394 or FL 395. Also, two parcels in FL 392 then held by the Geneveys family, fols. 432v(h) and 433 (b), seem to have been omitted in FL 395.)

26v Anthonius de Adventhica filius deffuncti Uldrici de Adventhica domicelli

(This fief is a portion of the noble fief of Johannes de Adventhica described in FL 392, fols. 426-435, dated in 1426. The other portion of the fief from FL 392 is found here in FL 395 in the form of a newly-constituted noble fief held by Claudius de Pitigniac)

above, fols. 13-26. The text of the present reconnaissance for Anthonius de Adventhica includes transcripts or paraphrases of two earlier documents from 1357 and 1430. However, the text describing this noble fief as it stood in 1458 includes some items that are not found in FL 392 or in the corresponding transcript of 1430, and whose source is presently unknown, namely a series of seven parcels held by the de Tombex heirs, fols. 34v (g) through 39v (b). While most of the parcels in the fief in FL 392 can be identified in either the fief of Claudius de Pitigniac or in the present fief of Anthonius de Adventhica, an entire section of the earlier fief in FL 392, fols. 433v (f) through 434 (m), at that time held by Johannes de Roumont and his comparcionarii, has not yet been found in 1458 in either FL 394 or FL 395. Also, two parcels in FL 392 then held by the Geneveis family, fols. 432v(h) and 433 (b), seem to have been omitted in the section of the present reconnaissance FL 395 describing the situation in 1458.)

20 may 1458 ? (anno et indicione premissis, but the day and month are not stated), Nobilis Anthonius de Adventhica filius deffuncti Uldrici filii quondam Johannis de Adventhica domicelli, in sequendo naturam atque formam suorum antecessorum maxime formam et tenorem contentos in licteris assignacionis eidem facte per quondam bone memorie Dominum Humbertum bastardum de Sabaudia tunc dominum Montagniaci, Grandiscurie, et Cudriffini, condominiumque Staviaci que inferius immediate inserentur, quarum pretextu ferit prelibato domino nostro duci homagium ligium contra quascunque personas... , et est ipsarum licterarum tenor talis, Ego Humbertus bastardus de Sabaudia miles dominus Montagniaci, Corberiarum, Grandiscurie, et Cudriffini... (the grant from Humbertus is dated 13 mar 1430) ; (the censiers seem to be cited simply as the unspecified heirs of individuals named in this prior “assignation” for Johannes de Advenchia) (probable explanation : the two prior reconnaissances cited here were not recorded in the previous terriers ?) Censiers : Uldricus filius quondam Petri de Villard ; heredes Perrodi de Montet de Cudriffino... ; Perrodus filius quondam dicti Morel ; liberos et heredes Johannis et Stephani de Crousaz ; Vuilliermus du Possat ; heredes Perrodi filius quondam dicti Ocetheti ; Clemencia de Crousaz ; liberos Jacobi de Rotondimonte ; Jacobus de Crousaz ; Nycodus filius ou magnieus ?; heredes Uldrici Monnier ; heredes Uldrici Fricqua de Villar ; heredes quondam Hugueti Soutier de Sancto Albino ; heredes Hugoneti Chardonaul de Bellarippa ; heredes seu liberi Aymoneti quondam de Bellarippa ; liberi Vuilliermi dicti dou May de Bellarippa ; Rodolphus Michon de Montmagnel ; Petrus Guymandis et parcionarii sui ; Perrodus de Bellarippa (these apparently from a reconnaissance dated in August, 1357 !) – and then, Uldricus de Advenchia son of the late said Johannis recognized 27 mar 1409... (and then Anthonius, a minor ?) : Roletus de Bellarippa, Petrus filius quondam Mermeti Genevex de Bellarippa, Franciscus Perrini de Constantina et sui comparcionarii, Aymonetus Tissot de Salavaux, Petrus Cossallat alias dou Bugnion ... by virtue of which, (possibly taking us down to the present day ?) ... filius Petri filii Roleti de Bellarippa, Marguareta eius soror uxor Petri Jannyn de Bellarippa, Johannes de Bellarippa filius quondam Vuilliermi de Bellarippa, Vuilliermus de Bellarippa senior filius quondam Petri filius Johannis de Bellarippa; Petrus Genevex de Bellarippa, Jaqueta uxor Humberti Boulard et Anthonia filia quondam Jaqueti Genevex. (A more thorough analysis, below, will be needed in order to connect the different parts of this “reconnaissance”). (See FL 392, fols. 426-435, for the reconnaissance of Johannes filius quondam Johannis de Adventhica, acting also for his brother Uldricus de Adventhica, dated 30 sep 1426, which, however, gives very little history. A careful comparison, property by property, will be needed in order to establish that this is indeed the same fief.)

Is it possible to follow the successive tenants of specific properties through the various transactions cited here? The architecture of this reconnaissance is as follows:

- Introduction, in 1458, fol. 26v
- Grant of 1430 by Humbertus de Sabaudia, fol. 26v
 - Introduction of 1430, fol. 26v
 - Paraphrase ? of reconnaissance by Johannes de Adventhica to Guiliiermus de Grandissono, 1357, fol. 26v
 - Introduction of 1357, fol. 26v
 - List of specific tenants and rents (no properties), fol. 26v
 - Conditions for the future transfer of this fief, fol. 27v
 - Closing formalities, fol. 27v
 - Paraphrase ? or summary of later reconnaissance, 1409, by Uldricus de Adventhica, tenants, rents, and properties not specified, fol. 28
 - Transfer of the fief in 1430, invoking the conditions of 1357, fol. 28
 - Main text of 1430, specific tenants, rents, and properties, fol. 28
- Tenants, rents, and properties enumerated in 1458, fol. 32v
- Closing formalities, fol. 41

The initial reconnaissance of 1357 assigns rents to individual tenants, but does not assign properties to support those rents – at this point, the rents are attached to individuals, not to the properties that they hold. This arrangement apparently continued, at least pro forma, into the reconnaissance of 1409, which simply applied the terms of the grant of 1357 to the new vassal, Uldricus de Adventhica. By 1430, however, the rents had become attached or “assigned” to specific parcels and thus to their tenants. As a consequence of this arrangement, it is possible to trace the succession of tenants of individual parcels from 1430 to 1458, but earlier generations of tenants are more difficult to establish. It is also possible to compare the situation in 1430 with the details given in FL 392 for the same or equivalent noble fiefs circa 1426.

We begin by extracting the text of the grant of 13 mar 1430:

(c) Item, Perrodus de Bellarippa duas partes unius cupe frument, duarum cuparum nucum, et octo quarteronos vini, (This is the end of the list of specific rents due from individuals in the time of Johannes de Adventhica.)

Et ipsaque omnia superius declarata dictus quondam Johannes de Adventhica pro se et suis heredibus recognoverit et voluerit ab eodem quondam Domino Guilliermo pro se et suis heredibus imperpetuum ac feudum ligium de manu et ore legitime recepissee, et videlicet tali forma quod idem quondam Johannes de Adventhica non tenebatur nec debebat ex pacto ipse vel sui heredes innare dictum quondam Dominum Guilliermum contra dominum episcopum Lausannensem nec dictum dominum episcopum Lausannensem contra dictum Dominum Guilliermum seu successores vel heredes suos imperpetuum hiis condicionibus sequentibus additis cum predictis,

Primo, videlicet quod predictus Dominus Guilliermus de Grandissono quondam aut heredes sui possint a dicto quondam Johanne de Adventhica vel heredibus suis redimere et habere predicta omnia superius declarata sibi in feudum tradita quandocunque sibi placent a festo Sancti Andree Appostoli usque ad sequens festum Pasche et non in alia parte anni, pro quaterviginti libris monete bonorum Lausannensium, qua rehempcione sic facta dictus Dominus Guilliermus aut heredes sui teneantur asseritur ? dicto quondam Johanni de Adventhica competenter in Williez pro se et suis heredibus centum solidatas terre annui redditus et ipsas sibi tradere in feudum ligium in quibusquidem solidatis terre annui redditus primo debeantur allocari assignari et computari eidem Johannis census et servicia qui et que annuatim debentur eidem ou Publoz subtus villam de Bellarippa prout sunt superius et inferius declarata tam frumenti, avene, nucum, anserum, quam denariorum, quas centum solidatas terre annui redditus post dictam rehempcionem ut dictum est assignatas ? dum ita sit, dictus quondam Johannes de Adventhica aut heredes suis tenantur ipsas recognoscere et tenere a predicto Domino Guilliermo et suis in feudum ligium et perpetuum eadem fidelitate condicione et honore quibus eidem Domino Guilliermo ad presens adstrictus erat rehempcionem ipsa non obstante, que predicta omnia et singula sit ut lacius continetur in quadam lictera recepta et confecta super hoc per Dominum Cononem de Adventhica cappellanum juratum curie officialatus Lausannensis, data sub sigillo dicti officialatus mense Augusti 1357. (The tenants and conditions specified in 1357 by Guilliermus de Grandissono end here.)

28 Item, quod successive, deffunctus Uldricus de Adventhica filius quondam predicti Johannis de Adventhica de consensu et mandato dicti eius patris et Johannis fratris sui presentis recognoverunt predicta omnia se tenere infeudum et sub homagio ligio a me dicto Humberto domino ut supra et tanquam domino Cudriffini et michi de... ? fecerit fidelitatem et homagium ligium, sub modis, condicionibus, et pactis in lictera supradesignata contentis et declaratis, nichil addito, nichil remoto vel mutato, prout per publicum instrumentum confectum super hoc manu Johannis Chalvin procuratoris Vuaudi notarii publici 27 mar 1409 clare constat. (Thus, by 1409, the original Johannes de Adventhica was still alive, but, with his approval, his sons Johannes and Uldricus recognized the same fief to Humbertus de Sabaudia, successor to the Grandisson family as the seigneur of Cudrefin. The first Johannes de Adventhica must have been quite young when he made the first reconnaissance in 1357, 52 years earlier.)

Item, et quod cum die presenti inferius descripta (the date is found below on fol. 33, 13 mar 1430) ego idem Dominus Humbertus dominus Cudriffini reherimer et adquisierum feuda et rem feudalem superius in presenti lictera declaratas a Aymone de Staviaco et Johanne de Adventhica domicellis tanquam tutoribus Anthonii impuberis filii quondam Uldrici de Adventhica domicelli (Uldricus, son of the original Johannes de Adventhica had thus died before 1430, leaving a son Anthonius under the age of 14), qua rehempcione me^{te} (uncertain abbreviation, perhaps mediante ?) tenear et debeam assignare et assectare eidem Anthonio impuberi centum solidatas terre annui redditus apud loz Publoz racione dicti homagii inde prestandi per dictum Anthonium et suos ut supra habetur in presenti lictera (still in 1430, however), Ecce quod die presenti (1430) ego idem dominus cupiens ad effectum ? per me conventa deducere a Deo gratuita mea voluntate et deliberato proposito assignam et assigno dicto Anthonio impuberi ac dictis tutoribus tutuorio nomine eiusdem dictas centas solidatas terre annui redditus super censibus et redditibus annualibus inferius declaratis, (In what follows, the tenants and their rents in 1430 seem to have no connection with the tenants and rents specified in 1357. Rather, Humbertus seems to have assembled a different series of properties within the same general area into a new fief, whose tenants would become its subjects, the principal constraint being that the total rent from the properties should be 100 “solidate”. Can these parcels be found in the noble fief of the de Adventhica family in FL 392 ? Were they taken from the holdings of the de Adventhica already recognized in that terrier ?)

(a) Et primo, super quinque cupas frumenti mesure Cudriffini novem solidos et sex denarios Lausannenses census quos debent annis singulis apud loz Publoz in quolibet festo Beati Mauricii Roletus de Bellarippa et sui comparcionarii pro rebus et possessionibus infrascriptis sitis et jacentibus in territorio de Bellarippa et in locis inferius designatis, (These properties held by Roletus de Bellarippa are part of the noble fief recognized by Johannes and Uldricus, sons of the late Johannes de Adventhica, in the terrier FL 392, fol. 426, dated 30 sep 1426.) Includes concession by Guilielmus de Grandissono, 08 jul 1382, containing names of many citizens of Cudriffin from that period (see below). Also includes reconnaissance ? of Girardus Hugoneti de Staviaco clericus locumtenens nobilis viri Girardi de Gebennis domini Corberie, castellanus Cudriffini, first Sunday after the feast of St. Gall, 1454, with additional names, and resolution of differences regarding these documents. The script here seems to show the exasperation of the clerk, as the text is wordy and repetitive, and exceedingly dull. There are many more vague abbreviations and the script is not as neat as it is in the rest of this volume. The text is poorly organized, and the only way we found to begin to tease out its structure was to transcribe most of it, in order to find out what it contains.
